The research project on Macao residents' sense of national identity was successfully completed

The findings arising out this research project are the result of over two years of a staggering amount of hard work espoused to an in-depth thinking thrown at an empirical observation of Macao residents' national identity issues. It has been premised on both an agreed-upon governance concept and a state of the art methodology designed by the Macau SAR government. The research project was superiorly led by Professor Huang Lai Ji of the Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences, and supported by Professor Tong Io Cheng, Dean of the Faculty of Law of University of Macau, Professor Luo Wei Jian, Director of the Constitution and Basic Law Research Center, the researchers also included Professor You Jun Yi from the Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences, Associate Professor Deng Shao Ling, post-doctoral researcher Wang Hua of Sun Yat-sen University, Senior Instructor Leong Cheng Hang, Faculty of Law, University of Macau, PhD student Zhao Ying Jie and PhD student Guo Li Sha, amongst a bevy of other relevant stakeholders.

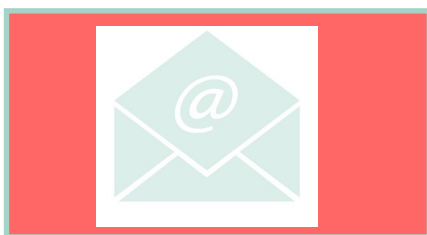

This report provides an overview on Macao's residents current sense of national identity. The underlying reasons for such a sense of national identity have already been parsed. Furthermore, this report explores avenues with a view to enhance Macao residents' sense of national identity. The research results arising out this body of empirical evidence have been lavished praise by Li Fei, chairman of the Constitution and Law Committee of the National People's Congress.
